Client Bill of Rights

At Avers & Biddle Counseling Associates LLC, we are committed to providing ethical, professional, and supportive care. As our client, you have certain rights to help ensure that you feel safe, respected, and informed throughout the therapeutic process.

You have the right to:

- Receive respectful and professional treatment designed to help you.
- Be treated in a safe and supportive environment, free from sexual, physical, or emotional abuse.
- Report any unethical, immoral, or illegal behavior by a therapist.
- Request and receive information about your therapist's qualifications, including license, education, training, experience, membership in professional organizations, areas of specialization, and any limits on their practice.
- Be provided, before beginning therapy, with written information about fees, payment methods, insurance coverage, estimated number of sessions, substitute therapist arrangements (for vacations or emergencies), and cancellation policies.
- Refuse to answer any question or share any information you choose not to disclose.
- Be informed if your therapist consults with others (such as supervisors, consultants, or students) about your case.
- Request updates on your progress in therapy.
